Risk Return Profile

Aggressive

You can afford to take on a higher level of risk (ie, will have a greater exposure to equities in your portfolio) because of your investment time horizon or your appetite for risk. You know that in taking the risk, you need to be patient if you want to achieve the results, thus you are willing to invest for the long-term and are prepared to tolerate some volatility in the short term, in anticipation of the higher returns you expect to receive in five years or beyond.

Portfolio Managers Comment

Global financial markets experienced volatility during the month as the ceasefire between the US and Iran came to an end, pushing oil prices higher and reigniting concerns about inflation. US inflation came in significantly lower than expected at 3.5%, down from 4.2% in the previous period and well below the consensus forecast of 3.8%. US employment data was weaker than anticipated, with non-farm payrolls coming in below expectations, while the unemployment rate decreased to 4.2%, largely due to a lower labour force participation rate of 61.5%. The US Federal Reserve kept interest rates unchanged at 3.5% to 3.75%. However, neither the accompanying statement nor the subsequent press conference provided clear guidance on the Fed's future policy direction, unsettling markets. Developed market equities (MSCI World USD) returned +0.53% over the month, outperforming emerging market equities which returned -3.03% (MSCI EM USD). Global bonds (Bloomberg Global Aggregated (USD) returned -0.53% over the month. The rand depreciated by 0.98% relative to the US dollar.
